

Recordkeeping Guideline for Human Resources

The following information provides a checklist of generally kept information in personnel files, a listing of which information should be kept separately.

Checklist for personnel files - generally kept information:

- ✓ Employment application and resume
- ✓ Reference checks
- ✓ Job descriptions
- ✓ Employee Information Form
- ✓ Records relating to hiring, promotion, demotion, transfer, layoff, rates of pay other forms of compensation and education and training records
- ✓ Letters of recommendation
- ✓ Disciplinary notices or documents
- ✓ Performance evaluations
- ✓ Test documents used by employer to make employment decisions
- ✓ Exit interviews
- ✓ Termination records

Personnel files to be maintained separately:

- ✓ Medical records (benefit applications, claim information, physical exams, medical leaves, worker compensation claims and drug and alcohol testing)
- ✓ Equal Employment Opportunity (any documents that identify race and sex)
- ✓ Immigration forms (recommended that these forms be maintained chronologically by year in a separate file): I-9, H-1B Visa, LCA
- ✓ Safety training records

The following information provides a listing of the parties and the files that they should have access to:

Personnel

- Employee
- Supervisor with a “need to know”
- Human Resources

Medical / Confidential / Equal Employment Opportunity / Safety Training

- Human Resources
- Employee
- Supervisor as needed for reasonable accommodation
- Government/legal agencies conducting investigation relevant to medical issues

Immigration

- Human Resources
- Employee
- Auditing/investigating agencies