Grow Matrix

Goal:	Reality:	Opportunity:	Way Forward:
• What are we working towards achieving? • How will we know when we get there? • SMART goal (specific, measurable, attainable, realistic, and time-bound)	• What is happening now? • What is going well? • What is challenging or not meeting the goal?	• Brainstorm Session of Solutions to the challenges or blocks to reaching the goal. • What else could you do? What is that constraint were removed – would it change things? • What are the advantages and disadvantages of each option?	• What will you do? • What is the plan or the commitment? • How will you stay accountable? • When will you touch base again?

Example

- You're helping a team member, achieve their goals using the GROW Model.
- They say that they would like a promotion to team leader within the next two years. This is a SMART goal – it's specific, measurable, attainable (as they already have one year of experience, and there are several team leader positions in their department), relevant (both to their overall career aspirations and the team's mission), and time- bound.
- You and this team member now look at theirr current reality. They are in an entry-level position, but they already have some of the skills needed to be team leader. You brainstorm the additional skills that they'll need in order to be successful in a team leader role: They need more experience of managing other people, and experience dealing with overseas customers. They also need to continue performing well in their role, so that they'll be considered for a promotion when one is available.
- You then both review their options. To get the experience they needs they could lead a small team on a small project. They could also spend time in the overseas team.
- Finally, you establish the will. As their manager, you offer to let them lead a small team on a minor project. If they performs well, they can take on additional projects with more responsibility in the future. They must also approach the overseas team to arrange to spend time in that department, and continue performing well in their current role. You agree to review their progress in three months' time.
