Dear Home Office,

I hope you all had a restful weekend. I am attaching the end-of-year performance review process and our approach for the 2024 annual increase presentation I used during the December All Staff. I also recapped key takeaways regarding our decision about the 2024 annual increase. The annual increase incorporates both external market trends and internal factors, such as employee performance, as a single figure.

To elaborate:

1. External Benchmarking: The external factors consider other national and non-governmental organizations (NGOs) providing the same range of percentage increases as we are. HR is also working with Marcum, a compensation consultant firm, to benchmark our salary matrix against the market. This study will be completed by the end of the 1st quarter 2024. The study will help identify any significant outliers if needed. These benchmarks ensure that our compensation remains competitive and aligned with industry standards.
2. Internal Factor - Employee Performance: The internal component is designed to recognize and reward individual contributions based on performance ratings. Depending on where individuals fall on the performance range, they will receive the following percentage increases:
    - 3% for Expected Results: This reflects a standard increase for employees whose performance meets the expected standards.
    - 4% for Above-Expected Results: Employees who consistently exceed performance expectations will receive a 4% increase.
    - 5% for Outstanding Results: Exceptional performers who go above and beyond in their roles will be rewarded with a 5% increase.

It is essential to communicate that employees falling below expected performance standards will not receive an annual increase this year. Instead, these employees will automatically be placed on a Performance Improvement Plan (PIP), and the expectation is to see improvement within the 1st quarter of 2024.

The 2024 end-of-year performance review process applies to Home Office employees and project directors in the field. The 2024 annual increase guidelines apply to both the Home and Field offices. Country Directors should socialize this message within their country office. Please also note that for new hires and promotions that occur after October 1, 2023, these employees will not be part of the annual increase process.

We understand the importance of clear communication during these processes, and HR is available to provide further guidance or answer any questions you might have.

Thank you for your continued support and commitment to Partners.

Your HR,
Natalie
