Partners of the Americas (POA) presents the following Branding Strategy and Marking Plan for the John Ogonowski and Doug Bereuter Farmer-to-Farmer Program.

1. Background Information

Notice of Funding Opportunity (NFO) No. 7200AA23RFA00006

The Partners of the Americas' 2023-2028 F2F Caribbean Basin Program proposed core countries are Guyana, Guatemala, Jamaica, and the Dominican Republic, but we remain flexible to work in other countries as requested by USAID. POA's results-oriented approach complements US Government (USG) climate adaptation and resilience activities and will focus on this critical challenge for agricultural development and growth through investments in innovations that increase adaptive capacity, productivity, and competitiveness which are critical to increasing the resilience of the Caribbean's most vulnerable and marginalized populations. F2F volunteers will train hosts in climate-smart agriculture and natural resource management practices, providing tailored recommendations to sustainably increase stakeholders' productivity, competitiveness, and food Security.

This Branding Strategy and Marking Plan has two main components: 1) communications, public or otherwise, that further the goals of F2F or meet project requirements, and 2) sharing F2F accomplishments and stories, including informing others that the work was achieved through the support of the American people, through USAID.

2. Proposed Branding Strategy

POA will follow Section 320.3.3 of USAID's Revised and Expanded ADS Chapter 320 on Branding and Marking policy (Partial Revision Date: 03/15/2022). The Branding Strategy will follow the requirements as outlined broadly in 22.C.F.R. 226.91. Additional details may be determined after the award is signed but POA and any sub-awardees or sub-contractors will follow the required Branding Strategy.

The Branding Strategy will ensure beneficiaries, stakeholders, and the public see that F2F is funded by USAID, through the generous support of "the American people." The Branding Strategy will flow down and apply to all sub-awardees and implementing partners.

3. Positioning

The name of the program to be implemented is the "John Ogonowski and Doug Bereuter Farmer-to-Farmer Program." The full name is used when possible, usually written as the "USAID-funded Partners of the Americas' John Ogonowski and Doug Bereuter Farmer-to-Farmer Program" or "the USAID John Ogonowski and Doug Bereuter Farmer-to-Farmer Program implemented by Partners of the Americas." The acronym used for the program is F2F.

USAID developed a unique logo for the Farmer-to-Farmer Program. This will be used along with the USAID identity and the Partners of the Americas organizational logo (see logo examples below).

F2F will feature the USAID Identity in full color (2-color) when feasible but in black-only or white in some settings, following the USAID Graphic Standards Manual and the USAID Partner Co-Branding Guide.

Below is the alternate Partners of the Americas logo which may be used if there are space restrictions.

4. Program Communications and Publicity

There are multiple audiences for F2F Program materials and information. One of the primary audiences is small and medium-scale producers, agricultural cooperatives and organizations, agri-businesses, and others along agricultural value chains. Beneficiaries are primarily identified by local staff familiar with agricultural sectors in each country. However, there will be some promotion of the program to potential beneficiaries through the following modes: mention of the program on collaborator websites (Ministry of Agriculture, universities) along with announcements of upcoming volunteer visits and their scheduled activities; press releases in local newspapers and online news sources; placement of F2F brochures in public spaces; and various meetings and events.

A second audience is the F2F volunteers themselves. To promote the program in the U.S. among current and potential volunteers, POA will do the following: arrange to have a table at various events and conferences where brochures and other materials can be shared; attend program-relevant events and panel discussions to network with interested individuals; maintain an updated F2F page on the POA website; keep a program blog with entries from F2F staff and volunteers to inform readers of in-country program activities; manage an Instagram page to share about the F2F program and volunteer assignments; retain a LinkedIn account for information, outreach, and recruitment about the F2F program; submit several Agrilink posts annually for sharing F2F activities; and publish a monthly e-newsletter to be distributed to the F2F volunteer network as well as the larger POA network.

In any publications (brochures, newsletters), media events (articles, press releases) and other meetings to promote and communicate information about the program, the message that this aid is "from the American people" will be incorporated and the USAID identity will be used.

The F2F Program is uniquely positioned to help further the goal of demonstrating that this assistance comes from the American people since the main input is technical assistance from U.S. volunteers. The unique people-to-people components of POA's Farmer-to-Farmer Program highlight the personal interaction between U.S. volunteers and their host country counterparts and increase goodwill and understanding between countries and cultures. In addition, POA's network of chapters in virtually every U.S. state helps spread the word about U.S. assistance abroad to the general public.

5. Acknowledgements

POA's F2F Programs have regularly collaborated with a number of organizations and institutions in-country, including other international NGOs and host country government ministries, usually the Ministry of Agriculture or the equivalent in each host country. These collaborations can be on a large scale (collaborating with an organization on the implementation of the Farmer-to-Farmer program in a particular country) or on a specific project or task (collaborating on an aquaculture project or a marketing study). POA believes it is important to recognize all collaborators – whether they are donors or not – and the collaborating organizations' logos or name may be used on materials developed and communications related to that area. The USAID and POA logos/identities would remain the featured ones, identifying collaborators as such.

6. Proposed Marking Plan

Partners of the Americas anticipates that the following materials may be produced under this program funded by USAID: case studies; brochures; web sites/pages; press releases; newsletters; PowerPoint presentations; training manuals and other materials; and an end-of-program publication. In addition, POA anticipates holding the following types of events: training courses; stakeholder meetings; seminars and workshops; and media events. Some specific technical materials and reports will be developed as needed and as part of the deliverables of specific assignments. These will be developed primarily by volunteer technical experts along with their host organizations. Commodities and equipment will not be distributed under the Farmer-to-Farmer program. Equipment purchases in the proposed budget are for the use of field office and headquarters staff.

For all these activities, publications, and printed materials associated with the Farmer-to-Farmer Program and funded by USAID, POA will mark each with the USAID Identity, of a size and prominence equivalent to or greater than Partners of the Americas', other donor's, or any other third party's identity or logo. In cases where logos are not used, POA will include in the narrative information about USAID and its funding of the Farmer-to-Farmer program.

Partners of the Americas will include the USAID-approved marking provision in any funded sub-award or sub-contract of the Farmer-to-Farmer program: "As a condition of receipt of this sub-award, marking with the USAID Identity of a size and prominence equivalent to or greater than the recipient's, sub-recipient's, other donor's or third party's is required. In the event the recipient chooses not to require marking with its own identity or logo by the sub-recipient, USAID may, at its discretion, require marking by the sub-recipient with the USAID Identity."

Any 'public communication' of the Partners of the Americas' Farmer-to-Farmer Program in which the content has not been approved by USAID will contain the following disclaimer: "This study/report/Web site (specify) is made possible by the support of the American People through the United States Agency for International Development (USAID.) The contents of this (specify) are the sole responsibility of (name of organization) and do not necessarily reflect the views of USAID or the United States Government."

7. Items That Will Not be Marked

The items listed that are produced or procured as part of the F2F Program will not bear the USAID identity.

- Newspaper articles and features, as POA cannot mandate that print or online newspapers publish all the USAID and partner logos.
- Memoranda of Understanding (MOUs) that do not require signature by a USAID representative.
- Minor consumable items.
